The Center's Relationship Based Activity Programs provide an ideal opportunity for students to practice relationship skills in a planned and supervised social setting. This is an especially good match for those in elementary, middle, and early high school who have difficulty making friends, are isolated from peers/adults or who have had poor outcomes from other social skills training programs. Our low student/staff ratio further supports the needs of students who have attention deficit issues, learning disabilities, Asperger's Syndrome or Bipolar Disorder. We focus on the joy of: making friends, developing empathy, understanding responsibility and respect, and learning skills to share our world with others.
